General information about Lithuania

Population

3.2 million, 50.3 inhabitants per square kilometer.

Area

65 200 square kilometers, i.e. 25 174 square miles.

Capital

Vilnius. Population ca. 550.000.

Government

Lithuania is a parliamentary republic with strong democratic traditions maintained since the restoration of independence on 11 March 1990. The President of the Republic is elected for a term of five years. Current President of Lithuania is Dalia Grybauskaitė, elected in 2009. The Lithuanian Parliament - Seimas - consists of 141 members, elected for a term of four years. Last parliamentary elections were held in 2008. Current speaker of Seimas is Irena Degutienė. The Government is formed by the Prime Minister - the post is currently occupied by Andrius Kubilius.

History

Lithuanian lands initially inhabited by Baltic tribes were united in the early 13th century by Mindaugas, crowned as King of Lithuania in 1253. Around that time the state became known as The Grand Duchy of Lithuania. Later the Duchy expanded and incorporated large portions of Slavic lands. In 1569 The Polish-Lithuanian Commonwealth was created. It lasted for more than two centuries until 1795 when the partitions of the Commonwealth were carried out. As a result of the partitions, Lithuania was annexed to the Russian Empire. A Lithuanian national revival built the foundations of the modern Lithuanian nation and independent Lithuania, declared in 1918. In June 1940 in conformity with the Molotov-Ribbentrop pact, Lithuania was occupied and annexed by the Soviet Union. The occupation was followed by mass deportations to Siberia. The resistance movement, which lasted until the 1960s, was brought down. The late 1980s saw vital social and political changes, which allowed the establishment of Sąjūdis, an anti-communist independence movement. A democratically elected parliament proclaimed Lithuania's independence on 11 March 1990. After an effortful period of transition in the 1990s, Lithuania became a full member of NATO and the European Union in 2004 and a member of the Schengen Agreement on 21 December 2007.
