Contribution of the Council of Europe

Action by the Conference of INGOs of the Council of Europe for the promotion of civil participation and active citizenship

The Council of Europe has always considered that independent non-governmental organisations are a vital component of European society, guaranteeing freedom of expression and association both of which are fundamental to democracy.

Recognising their role, the Council of Europe is unique in providing international NGOs with the opportunity to acquire participatory status.

The Conference of International Non-Governmental Organisations (INGOs) is the collective body of the some 320 INGOs enjoying participatory status with the Council of Europe. Through this status INGOs are actively contributing to the decision-making process at the Council of Europe and to the implementation of its programmes, thus ensuring their relevance to the expectations of Europeans. Giving substance to participatory democracy is one of the priorities of the Conference of INGOs and this is reflected in its main initiatives and activities. Three initiatives of the Conference of INGOs are of particular relevance for an enabling environment for NGOs and for civil participation.

The Code of Good Practice for Civil Participation in the Decision-Making Process defines at European level a set of general principles, guidelines, tools and mechanisms for civil participation in the political decision-making process at local, regional and national level. The Code is based on actual experiences from NGOs sharing their good practices and methods for engaging with public authorities. It offers tools that may be applied at any stage and that provide cross-cutting support to the process of participation. These elements are then combined to form a matrix of civil participation that provides a visual presentation of the inter-related nature of the process and guidance for decision makers and NGO activists for further enhancing civil participation. The Code of Good Practice is being used by NGOs and public authorities and is available in 21 languages. The Code of Good Practice is one of the instruments currently used by the Council of Europe in its support to the development and institutionalisation of effective mechanisms for dialogue, consultation and co-operation between civil society and authorities.

The Expert Council on NGO Law examines the legal and regulatory framework for NGOs as well as the administrative and judicial practices which affect NGOs. It provides advice on how to bring national law and practice into line with Council of Europe standards and European good practice. It has carried out studies on themes such as the conditions for the establishment of NGOs, on the internal governance of NGOs and on sanctions and liability in respect of NGOs. When the need arises, it has been preparing opinions on particular problems facing NGOs in specific countries, such as the “foreign agents’ law” in the Russian Federation or the amendments to NGO legislation in Azerbaijan. More recently, it has been working on the question of regulating political activities of NGOs which has become an issue in connection with restrictions on foreign funding for NGOs. Through its Expert Council, the Conference of INGOs monitors the implementation of Committee of Ministers’ Recommendation (2007)14 to member states on the legal status of NGOs in Europe.

Action Plan of the Conference of INGOs and fact-finding visits

The Conference of INGOs adopted its Action Plan June 2015 to January 2018 at its plenary meeting in June. The aim of the Action Plan is to increase the impact of the activities of the Conference with the Council of Europe and in member States. The Conference, as the body representing civil society at the Council of Europe, aims to be closer to the grassroots and to do this will set up fact-finding visits to member States. Such visits will contribute to the Conference’s expert knowledge on the participative practices of national NGOs and will support the initiative of the Secretary General of the Council of Europe which aims at developing new guidelines on civil society’s effective and meaningful participation in the political decision-making process.
