4. IMPLEMENTATION OF OTHER POLITICAL NORMS, PRINCIPLES, DECISIONS AND INTERNATIONAL HUMANITARIAN LAW

4.1 How does your State ensure that International Humanitarian Law and Law of War are made widely available, e.g., through military training programmes and regulations?

In order to fulfill the obligations pertaining to Romania, according to the international treaties in the area of humanitarian law, the Government's Decision no. 420/2006 amended and supplemented by Decision 408/2011 instituted the National Commission of International Humanitarian Law, as a consultative body of the Government, without legal personality.

The Commission comprises a representative of each of the following Ministries: the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the Ministry of National Defence, the Ministry of Justice, the Ministry of Internal Affairs, the Ministry of National Education and the Ministry of Health.

By Decision no. 298 of 17 December 2007, the Prime minister approved the National Strategy of Romania for the enactment of international humanitarian law, with the purpose of ensuring that the obligations pertaining to Romania, as a result of ratifying international treaties in this field, are known, respected and disseminated amongst civil society.

The principles and the norms of Humanitarian Law (The Law on War, The Law on Armed Conflicts) were comprised in the new defence laws and in the military regulations.

A Legal and International Humanitarian Law Office works within the Defence Staff and within the headquarters of the categories of forces, coordinating the integration of International Humanitarian Law provisions in the military education programs and in forces training programs. In 1993 the Centre for International Humanitarian Law was founded in Ploiesti.

The Centre issued a Methodology for the personnel of the Ministry of National Defence.

A consistent program for education in the field of the Humanitarian Law was settled at the National Defence College, at the National Defence University and at the Military Academies of the categories of forces.

The Government Regulations no.420/2006 amended and supplemented by Decision 408/2011 established the settlement and organization of the National Commission on International Humanitarian Law and the Prime Minister Decision no. 298/2007 approved the National Strategy of Romania on applying International Humanitarian Law.

4.2 What has been done to ensure that armed forces personnel are aware of being individually accountable under national and international law for their actions?

The commanding officers, the military and civilian personnel participating in peace support operations or in international military exercises follow a special training on International Humanitarian Law aspects.

The Geneva Conventions and their Additional Protocols, Hague Convention, the Status of the International Criminal Court and other international treaties were translated, printed and distributed to the military units and educational institutions and constitute the basic sources in the educational and training process, in planning and conducting military operations.

In 2005, the Centre of International Humanitarian Law elaborated, for the instruction of military personnel from Ministry of National Defence, the Methodology of the Training in the Field of International Humanitarian Law and the Regulation on the Status of Captured Persons in Case of Armed Conflict.

If the commanding officer of the Romanian detachment receives an order or a directive issued by the hierarchically superior authorities of the mission that is against international law or the law of war, he/she will refuse to execute the order or the directive.

Law no. 121/2011 on the participation of armed forces in missions abroad

The National Commission of International Humanitarian Law, which is a consultative body of the Government, monitors permanently the full and correct implementation of the provisions of International Humanitarian Law in the national system.

4.3 How does your State ensure that armed forces are not used to limit the peaceful and lawful exercise of human and civil rights by persons as individuals or as representatives of groups nor to deprive them of national, religious, cultural, linguistic or ethnic identity?

As stipulated in art. 118 of Romanian Constitution, the components of the Romanian National Defence System can act only to “guarantee the sovereignty, independence and unity, the territorial integrity of the state and its constitutional democracy”.

The decisional process for the actions of the Military is complex, involving an important number of national authorities or decision makers, thus having the guarantee that the national legal provisions are fully respected.

Also, the obligations and duties of the militaries as stipulated in the Law no. 80/1995 on the Status of the Professional Militaries with subsequent amendments or in the Law no. 384/2006 on the Status of the Officers NCOs and enlisted militaries with subsequent amendments exclude any involvement in actions envisaging the limitation of the peaceful and lawful exercise of human and civil rights by persons in their capacity as individuals or as representatives of groups.

According to the provisions of the same laws:

“the militaries should not perform any actions which are against the legal provisions, the law of war or the international conventions to which Romania is a state party; the failure to comply with orders in these conditions will not be punished.”

4.4 What has been done to provide for the individual service member’s exercise of his or her civil rights and how your State ensure that the country’s armed forces are politically neutral?

As citizens of Romania, militaries have the same rights and obligations as all other citizens. Except for specific restrictions or restraints imposed to perform the military duty, the military personnel can exercise its civil rights as any other citizen of Romania.

Law no. 80/1995 on the Status of the Professional Militaries with subsequent amendments and Law no. 384/2006 on the Status of the Officers NCOs and enlisted militaries with subsequent amendments establishes the rights and duties of the militaries.

The active officers or NCOs are not allowed to:

- be members of political parties, formations or organizations or to advertise by any means or activities in favor of any party or independent candidate for a public position;

Section IV Additional information on the implementation of the Security Council Resolution

No.1325 concerning women, peace and security, submitted pursuant to the provisions of the OSCE Action Plan for the promotion of gender equality, in accordance with the Ministerial Decision No. 14/04, as well as No. 14/5 on Women In Conflict Prevention, Crisis Management and Post-Conflict Rehabilitation

I. PREVENTION

1. Measures to increase armed forces personnel understanding of the special needs and contributions of women in conflict

According to a specific order by the minister of defence, each military unit / structure must include every year a specific training issue on gender equality in its training program. All military training institutions courses should comprise subjects on the equality of chances for genders, on the measures to combat discrimination and on the appropriate corrective measures.

The formation cycles applied, prior to departure, for the MoND personnel participating in missions abroad should include issues on the observance and protection of the gender equality.

Within the Romanian battalions in Afghanistan, the CIMIC structure includes a specialized team named FET (Female Engagement Team), entirely staffed with women militaries having as main responsibility the participation in any mission involving local women. One of the purposes of this mission is to observe local cultural norms. The team keeps also a constant contact with the local women in order to increase the level of mutual trust and to facilitate their access to security, health and schooling assistance.

2. Measures to address the violation of rights of women and girls, in line with international standards

According to article 4 of Romanian Constitution, citizens of both genders have equal rights before the law and before public authorities. Article 16 establishes that the Romanian State should guarantee the equality of chances for men and women to occupy public civilian and military positions. A subsequent legal framework details on these provisions. The Law no. 202/2002 reissued in 2013 contains provisions on measures to promote opportunities for equal chances and to eliminate the direct or indirect discrimination on gender criteria in all aspects of the public environment. Law no. 395/2005 on the voluntary military service explicitly specifies that all Romanian citizens, male or female, are allowed enrolling in the military service without any discrimination.

In the manuals for military personnel training in the field of IHL there are provisions on rules to be observed in case of armed conflict, including specific protection of women rights. Any potential violation of women rights by Romanian militaries is subject to punishment according to the national legal framework which has extended provisions in the field of women rights protection.

II. PARTICIPATION

1. Measures to increase the number of women in general and in decision-making positions in the armed forces of the Ministry of National Defence

Men and women participate with equal chances in the selection process in order to enter these institutions.

The only difference made for genders is on the conditions for physical tests. The professional training program is the same for both genders.

There are no differences in the promotion conditions for men and women. Women militaries can occupy any military position. The only exception is in the case of priest positions, as the Orthodox Church do not allow women to be priests.

2. Measures to increase the number of women in peacekeeping forces

Both at the level of MoND and at the level of the forces, initiatives have been launched to proactively involve women militaries in all peacekeeping operations and also to enhance the visibility of their participation and contribution to these missions.

The missions abroad conducted by the Romanian Military in different operational theatres showed the importance of the complementarities between men and women militaries capacities and expertise for the effective action in armed conflicts.

III. Protection

1. Increased access to justice for women whose rights are violated

There are no specific provisions in connection with military actions to provide increased access to justice for women whose rights are violated. The national legal framework in Romania has wide specific provisions protecting women rights and a range of strong measures to punish the violations.

IV. Other information

The Ministry of National Defence has taken the lead in promoting and implementing the WPS Agenda at national level, by creating a dedicated structure on this domain, the Gender Management Office. The main role of this office is to ensuring the connection with international organizations and coordinating the activities of national institutions with such responsibilities. This structure has coordinated the National Implementation Group (NIG), which includes representatives of the Ministry of National Defence, the Ministry of Internal Affairs, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, the National Agency for Equal Opportunities, the Romanian Intelligence Service, the Special Telecommunications Service, the Protection and Guard Service's Organization and the National Administration of Penitentiaries. The NAP is the instrument underlying for the elaboration of common policies and directions for the implementation of the UNSCR 1325 (2000) used by the institutions of the national system of defence, public order and national security in Romania, as well as by other institutions of the central administration with responsibilities in the field.

The key objectives of the NAP are:

- Gender mainstreaming in security and defence policies;
- Increasing the representation and significant participation of women in peace negotiations, mediation processes and peacekeeping missions;
- Preventing and combating all forms of discrimination, harassment and sexual violence based on gender;
- Collaboration with civil society in the process of implementing the WPS Agenda.
